International Summer Conference of Group Analysis DIFFERENT HOMES FOR GROUP ANALYSIS

[July 6-8, 2012]
Dubingiai, Lithuania

Lithuanian Group Analytic Society and Vilnius University invites practitioners, teachers and students of group analysis and group psychotherapy to International Summer Conference of Group Analysis.

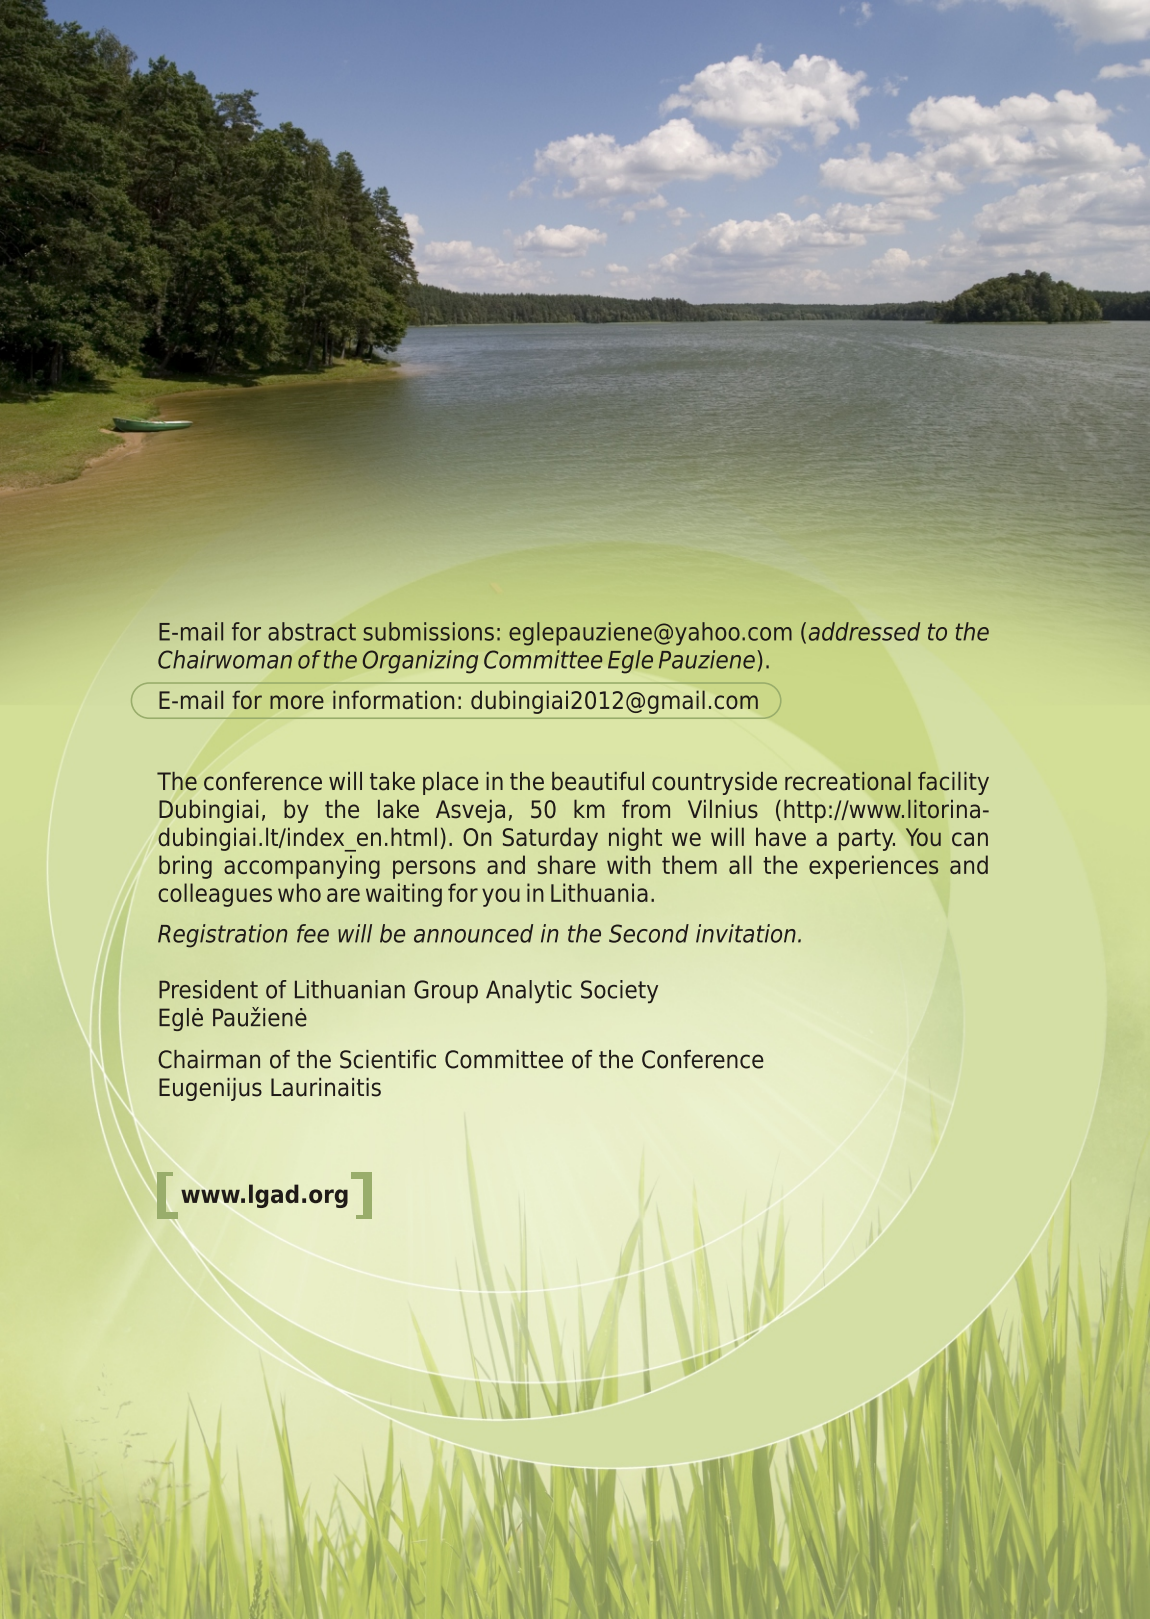

Group analysis, developed from the disciplines of psychoanalysis, sociology, developmental and social psychology, and systems theory has applications in different clinical and social settings helping specific groups of people, in organisational consultancy, and in teaching and training.

Group analysts work in a wide range of contexts with a wide range of difficulties and problems applying the method to a variety of problems and life situations. Working with the different patients and clients in different settings requires from us to widen the knowledge and experience in applied group analysis. How can the borders of group analysis be widened?

Widening the understanding of the application of group analysis in all aspects of professional practice, in therapeutic, organisational and educational settings, and in the public and private sector is the aim of the International Summer Conference of Group Analysis. It is important for health professionals-medical and non-medical - and for people working in educational or organisational settings and interested in developing their understanding of the applications of group analysis to group functioning.

Lithuanian Group Analytic Society invites professionals working with groups in different settings using group analysis to share and discuss their understanding of the group processes. We invite to submit proposals for the plenary lectures, optional workshops and also the proposals to conduct small discussion groups and the large experiential group. Deadline for submissions - 15th of November, 2011.

Language of the Conference is English.
